

My Feedback

My peers don't know too much about the Constitution. Out of the 20 peers who took the survey, only 4 got all questions correct. Most of my peers already knew what the Preamble was and when it was written. But most of my peers did not know how long it took to write the Constitution. Only half of my peers knew the three different branches of government and how many words are included in the Constitution.

I feel like the Constitution is a legal document that the past leaders of our country signed back in 1787. It is the historical artifact that our country was built on so I believe that more kids my age should know more about it. They should know that the Bill of Rights is the first 10 amendments in the Constitution. I strongly believe that the more we know about our country's rights and the beginning of our democracy, the more people will understand our government.
