

Checks and Balances

I am the Congress, and I write the law.

I think it will be for the good of all.

He is the President and might not sign.

He can veto, if fault he finds.

If he signs, it becomes new law.

But one day, it might show a flaw.

Then the people can test it through the court.

If not constitutional, it will be no more.

Power in America is held by branches three.

That's what makes us a democracy.

We have no emperor, no king, no queen.

But three equal branches on the liberty tree.

Lena McIntyre

AGE 9